TAPA-MAKING NO LONGER PROFITABLE

On account of the withdrawal of the Oceanic Company's steamships from San Francisco to Apia, Samoa, via Honolulu, the natives of Samoa no longer make curios as formerly, and tapa cloth is hard to get in any quantity as in former days.

Mason Mitchell, American Consul-General at Apia, who was here several months ago while waiting for an opportunity to go to his post, says that the lack of regular steamship callings at Apia has effected a great change in the manufacturing of curios, and that tapa-making is gradually falling off. Mr. Mitchell also writes to the Promotion Committee that he has been quite ill recently of fever.
